ABOUT THE WINE

Temps are starting to drop so why not start edging more fuller bodied reds into rotation? Organic and natural Tempranillo is a dang fine way to start that cold weather red transformation! We love this tinto (aka red) wine from Altos de Montanchez, and it's always fun to try Tempranillo from outside of the big hitting Rioja and Ribera del Duero regions. Juan Sojo and Ángel Luis González, owners and winemakers, are fully committed to making wine authentically. In fact, currently they're the only organic producers in the whole Extremadura region of Spain.

"Making good wine requires patience. The problem with larger producers is that as soon as their tanks are filled up, they have a long line of grapes waiting to be deposited. It makes being patient impossible." - Juan and Ángel

We applaud their vision and hope their influence grows in their region, as their wines are truly standouts in quality and style. This bolder red is perfect to pop on a chilly evening and pairs nicely with meaty and hearty cool weather dishes!

Bold flavors of tobacco, herbs and dark berries.
