

1215 Wine Bar & Coffee Lab

Field Recordings, “Morro Dew”

Varietal:

Grüner Veltliner, Citrus

Region:

Edna Valley, California

Farming:

Certified Organic

Soil Type:

Stoney Chert

Fermentation:

Stainless Steel

Dry/Sweet:

Dry

Body:

2/5

Acid:

4/5

Tannin:

0/5

ABOUT THE WINE

We’ve been on a canned wine kick lately! Canned wines may seem suspicious as high end-products, but we believe strongly that great wine can and does come in all packaging forms: cans, bags, boxes, screwcaps, and even liter or large format glass bottles. What really matters is the quality of the wine inside and we’ve always got your back on that front. Why have canned wines been hitting the spot lately for us? Well, they’re super convenient in the summer months when grilling, hanging by the pool, or even for taking out kayaking, but now that fall has hit, we’re already enjoying cans by our backyard bonfires and camping trips. They’re convenient, more portable, and more sustainable for the earth than traditional glass bottles. Plus, one can is over two glasses of wine, so it’s totally shareable and great if you’re not expecting you can finish a whole bottle on your own.

We thought we’d kick off our wine club canned wine inauguration with this super fun and cheeky wine hybrid from Field Recordings out of California. Yes, the can looks like Mountain Dew and the use of a proprietary citrus blend with the tart Grüner Veltliner grapes almost gives it a dry Mountain Dew-esque flavor, plus the vineyard it comes from is called Morro Dew, so it seems it was a perfect storm for a cheeky ode to the drink of our youth! They even use the tagline, “Do the Dew” and recommend pairing it with a Cheesy Gordita Crunch or a Crunchwrap Supreme! Who are we to argue with that?

Two cans make one wine bottle, so we’ll let you decide how and when to crack ‘em!

Kinda Mountain Dew-esque, but dry and crisp, and none of the caffeine or added sugar!

